16:20 Session 1: The Stress Test – How decarbonisation technologies perform in the commercial realities of the charter market

While the market is in no doubt about the technical innovation involved in contemporary decarbonisation solutions, there is still uncertainty about how they perform in the uniquely competitive charter market. This session will explore, what the key barriers to scale are, how risk is allocated, how upside is shared, what 'good looks like' and how this is communicated in a charterparty.

Moderator: Philippa Charlton, Chief Marketing Officer, Lloyd's Register

Panellists will include:

Kathleen Elward, VP Commercial Operations, Silverstream Technologies

James Scaife, Chief Financial Officer, NatPower Marine

Noel Tomlinson, Business Development - Commercial Shipping & Ports, BMT

Clare Urmston, Chief Executive Officer, Anemoi

17:10 Refreshments break

17:25 Session 2: How does nuclear power change commercial dynamics in global shipping?

If nuclear propulsion eliminates fuel costs and operational emissions, how does it change commercial behaviour in shipping? Does embedding energy in high-capex, long-life assets push the industry toward balance-sheet-driven ownership and long-term contracts, and how do chartering, pricing and risk allocation evolve when costs are no longer voyage-dependent? In a sector built on flexibility, how do regulatory complexity and risk perception across jurisdictions shape where—and whether—nuclear ships can trade?

Moderator: Mark Williams, Chief Executive Officer, Maritime London

Panellists will include:

Alfred Butrous, Director, Global Shipping, Logistics & Offshore, Citi

Olivia Haslam, Deputy Director for Ports and Shipping, UK Department for Transport

Patrick Ryan, Sustainability Director and Head of Club Secretariat, UK P&I Club & Chair, IG Nuclear Committee

Mark Tipping, Global Offshore Power 2 X Director, Lloyd's Register

Baroness Vere, Group Head Market Development, CORE POWER
